- 1357 2 Kopecks 1915. Iron. 4.87 gm. Apparently a trial issue or a Pattern. Of the greatest rarity Prooflike, Choice uncirculated $ 5,000
- Discovered in London about 15 years ago, this amazing Iron 2 Kopecks was brought to Russia in 2002 by Chicago-coin dealer Alexander Basok. Representing the coin's owner, Mr. Basok brought the coin to be examined by the State Hermitage in St. Petersburg and the State Historical Museum (SHM) in Moscow. Both institutions expressed the opinion that the piece is genuine, struck with the identical dies and identical edge as the Copper 2 Kopecks. In a detailed Expert Conclusion signed by V.V. Uzdenikov and I.V. Shiryakov, the SHM opined that this coin was struck as a pattern. Neither institution had previously known of the production of such pieces. This coin was then presented at the Annual Pan-Russian Numismatic conference in Pskov in 2002 and elicited great interest. As a result, M.I. Smirnov, Director of Archives of the St. Petersburg Mint uncovered a document dated 1915, which states that 7 coins were struck in iron in that year and were to be transferred within the departments of the Mint. The document did not specify as to denominations and respective quantity.*
- Heretofore unheard of in Russian numismatics, this pattern coin offered here illustrates a very important development in Russian coinage, a change that was not uncommon in other European coinages of the time. As with other countries embroiled in World War I, Russia saw the need to change coinage in copper -- a much needed metal for the war, to iron. The obscurity of these Russian patterns, though, and this one in particular attests to their extreme rarity. And thus unlike other warring European nations at the time, the change from copper to iron appears to have barely been even at an experimental trial stage in Russia and not even short-lived but ephemeral.*
- 1358 Token. 25 Kopecks. No date. Lead. 4.06 gm. Vessel sailing left, French legend around / 25 Kop. in wreath. Rare and apparently unpublished Choice uncirculated $ 100
- 1359 Jetton 1896. 7.43 gm. Coronation of Emperor Nicholas II and Alexandra Feodorovna. Sm 1102, Rudenko 1896.1 (R). Crowned cipher of Nicholas II and Alexandra Feodorovna / Crown above 2 line inscription and date. A few surface marks. Onve lightly wiped Uncirculated $ 100
- 1360 GOLD Coinage with the name of Alexander II. 4 Ducats 1905 G. 12.75 gm. Bit 8 (R1), Basok – 16 (R4). Bust of Austrian Emperor Franz Josef I r.; legend with the title of Russian Emperor Alexander II / Russian double-headed. Rare especially so well preserved and unholed Choice uncirculated $ 1,000
